Post Honors Its Finest

The Washington Post honored three of its finest employees during the annual Eugene Meyer Awards held at the Northwest Building on Tuesday evening, November 13. Hundreds of employees gathered to celebrate the achievements and contributions of this year's winners: MARTIN KADY, Advertising; MARY MCGRORY, News, and STANLEY UTTERBACK, Accounting.

"This award recognizes excellence, whether seen by millions of readers, or only by colleagues in the building," noted Publisher BO JONES as he announced the three winners.

"I love the [Eugene] Meyer Awards," said Chairman DON GRAHAM during his welcoming remarks. "Eugene Meyer believed in the paper and I just have to say that he would have been enormously proud of the role that this newspaper has played since September 11."

The first award was presented to Utterback, accounts payable manager in the Accounting Department. Utterback is the first representative from the Accounting Department to win the Eugene Meyer Award.

"Stan is the man," explained

Jones, "to see that all of The Post vendor bills get paid, all 60,000 or so of them, totaling hundreds of millions of dollars each year. He epitomizes the back office infrastructure that supports the newspaper's mission, that we trust and rely on here."

"During the last 38 years, it has been my pleasure to work in the Accounting Department," said Utterback. "In its own special way for me, it has been a very good and very exciting place to work. I am truly grateful and very honored to be one of this year's Eugene Meyer Award winners."

During his introduction of Kady, a senior advertising manager, Jones noted that National Advertising Director RICK TIPPETT told him that Kady's "blood runs blue, Washington Post blue." Jones also referred to Kady's strength as a manager. "Like BEN BRADLEE and so many others here, Marty hires great people, motivates them and lets them flourish. He delights in their successes."

"This year has been quite a year..." remarked Kady. "Now we face challenges like we've never faced before...it makes me proud the way we continue to handle these challenges, just like we always have. We handle them proactively, we handle them informatively, and we handle them with sensitivity. It makes me proud to be called a Postie."

A highlight of the evening was when Jones showed a video clip that was taken in November 1998 when McGrory, a national columnist, received the Fourth Estate Award from the National Press Club for a lifetime of contributions to American journalism. In the video clip, Katharine Graham gave a heartfelt tribute to McGrory. "I admire Mary McGrory enormously and The Post is honored to carry Mary's column... In an age when very few people seem to stand for anything, Mary stands for principles, both for our country and our profession."

During his remarks, Jones read excerpts from a few of McGrory's almost 2,000 columns and mentioned several of McGrory's achievements and awards.

"The Post has given me the chance to do what I always wanted to do," said McGrory. "On my grave stone it will say newspaperwoman. And if they say prove it, I'll show them the Eugene Meyer Award."

POST SCRIPTS

CREATE AN ORNAMENT AND HELP A HOMELESS FAMILY

All Post departments, bureaus and the plants are invited to create an ornament to be included on The Washington Post Tree which will be displayed at the Enchanted Forest at the Capital Expo Center in Chantilly from November 30 to December 2. The Enchanted Forest is a project of the Junior League of Northern Virginia. The Washington Post tree will be auctioned with other trees created by local companies and organizations and the proceeds will be used for the construction of the Lifeworks Center, an Arlington-based family resource center which will assist homeless families in Northern Virginia.

The ornament should be no bigger than 6" x 6", be tastefully decorated, and must incorporate a design or theme tied to The Post or your department/unit. Be creative, but please keep in mind that in all probability the tree will be sold to someone outside of The Post employee family. The deadline for submission of the ornament is Tuesday, November 27. Please deliver the ornament in a box, or other safe container to the Public Relations Department on the 7th floor of the Northwest Building. If you have any questions, contact CARRIE MORSE at x7972. For information about attending the Enchanted Forest Holiday Celebration, look for the ads running in The Post, call (703) 848-2884, or visit www.jlnv.org/tef.html.

A video compilation of The Washington Post's photo coverage of the terrorist attack on the Pentagon and the aftermath from September 11 to October 11, aired around the world on the American Forces Radio and Television Service (AFRTS) during the Veterans Day weekend.

A moving tribute to the victims, heroes, and families affected by the attack, the video was a collaborative effort between The Washington Post and Washington Post.Newsweek Interactive, a subsidiary of The Washington Post Company. The photo tribute was compiled and edited by AME/Photography JOE ELBERT. It had a potential audience of 750,000 military personnel, Department of Defense civilians, family members, and many of the U.S. Military in the "Enduring Freedom" operations both on land and at sea. The video was also scheduled to be broadcast on the internal Pentagon cable television channel last Friday, November 9 and several times a day this week.
